Although we want to do everything we can to look after our much-needed supporters, we are unable to make a refund in the majority of cases.

2. Regulation

2.1 As a registered Charity, we are subject to regulation by the Charities Commission for England and Wales under The Charities Act 2011.

2.2 We also adhere to the Fundraising Code and standards as laid out by the Fundraising Regulator.

2.3 Other legislation may apply to the refunding of any donation, relating to Financial Fraud and Money Laundering: this is not an exhaustive list and staff and trustees may need to take specialist advice.

2.4 As a rule, Charities are not permitted to refund any donations. However, there may be exceptional circumstances.

2.5 The Code of Fundraising Practice (Fundraising Regulator) refers to guidance issued by the Institute of Fundraising.

This states:

Returning Donations a) Fundraising organisations which are charities MUST* not return donations unless certain criteria are fulfilled. For all other fundraising organisations, donations MUST only be refunded in line with any policies or in exceptional circumstances. It may not be lawful to return a donation and fundraisers MUST take advice from legal advisers or the Charity Commission / OSCR before doing so.

When can we give a refund?

A legal obligation to return a donation.

- If certain conditions are attached to the gift. For example, where an appeal for a particular purpose fails to raise sufficient funds to achieve that purpose.

- Where a donation for £100 or more (total amount or aggregate, paid by credit or debit card) has been made in response to a radio or television appeal, then a seven day 'cooling-off' period applies.
- If we or any third party event organiser cancel an event or challenge.

A moral obligation to return a donation.

- Fraud – If the supporter can show their card was used without their knowledge.
- Legacies – If a charity receives a legacy but there's evidence that the person who died had changed their mind since making the will.
- Other gifts – An example might be where a person has made a gift to a charity but it later became clear that the donor's generosity to the charity had reduced them to poverty, the charity trustees might feel morally obliged to make an ex gratia payment by returning all or part of the gift
- People in vulnerable circumstances – guidance has been issued by the Fundraising Regulator and the Institute of Fundraising which may lead to donations needing to be refused or refunded.

3. Process

3.1 Any request for a refund should be made in writing and this will be assigned to a Manager to begin an investigation.

The investigation will review the circumstances of the request, including personal details of the donor, the intended purpose of the donation (if applicable), the method of donor payment and the reasons for the refund.

Advice will be sought from the Charity Commission if we believe this is required.

Charities are not permitted to refund donations by law, except under very exceptional circumstances.
